MAY ADOPT COTTAGE PLAN FOR NEW ASYLUM

GOVERNMENT WILL SHORTLY CONSIDER THE APPOINTMENT OF A SUPERINTENDENT FOR NEW INSTITUTION AT PONOKA—OPENED APRIL FIRST

For the purpose of selecting a superintendent for the new provincial asylum for the insane at Ponoka, which is about completed, Hon. Arch. McLean, provincial secretary, under whose control the asylum will come, will leave shortly for the east, where he expects to secure a man for the position.

"We will secure none but the very best man possible for the position," said Mr. McLean to the Capital, this morning.

Tenders for Equipment.

Tenders will shortly be called for the supply of equipment for the asylum. Hon. Mr. McLean and Dr. Irving, provincial health officer, have just returned from a trip to Winnipeg, where they have been looking into the matter of equipment and supplies. They visited the Selkirk asylum.

"We expect to have the asylum completed by the first of April," said Hon. Mr. McLean, "when we will remove the 150 Alberta patients now at Brandon to the new building. I believe that our new asylum will be one of the most up-to-date in Canada."

May Adopt Cottage System.

In view of the fact that there are now sufficient number of patients to occupy the entire capacity of the new asylum when it is opened, it is probable that the provincial government will decide to adopt the cottage system, in the treatment of some of the patients and if this is done, the capacity of the asylum will be increased. There is a section and a quarter of ground in the asylum property, which will give sufficient room for the establishment of the cottage system, if it is decided to adopt this system. It is understood that Premier Sifton is in favor of the cottage system. This system is one for the treatment of certain cases separately and individually, and is in vogue in Woodstock, Ont., and other places, and has proved most satisfactory.

CHINESE WILL LOCATE ON KINISTINO AVENUE

CELESTIALS ARE PURCHASING LOTS AND IN TIME HOPE TO HAVE MODERN CHINESE SETTLEMENT IN EAST END OF CITY

"That, if the city does not take steps to segregate the Chinese in some portion of the city they will proceed to do in their own way was the statement made by a prominent Chinese merchant this morning. He admitted that there were not enough Chinese in the city yet to make a settlement, but he thought it would be a great convenience to the Chinese themselves, "We have some place like same place where we are not disturbed by police. We have little game all quiet," said Quong Gee, and policeman no can see. One China boy buys lots on Kinistino and other lots same," he said. "No plenty 'nuff China boys in city yet, but soon have plenty to make go."

Chief Lacey stated this morning that he did not see any necessity of having the Chinese away to themselves. "The Chinese in Edmonton are a quiet law-abiding people," he said. "I don't seem to have any of the riff-raff such as there are in other cities," he said. He also stated that he was not taking any steps to prevent them settling.

The lots which it is stated that several of the Chinese are securing together are said to be down on Kinistino and Namayo avenue, farther out than the present centre of the Chinese settlement which is about the corner of Rice street and Namayo.

The Chinese are not satisfied with the present condition. They are kept too strictly under the eye of the police when scattered it would appear from the statements made by several of the more prominent Chinese in the settlement. The chief advantages they seem to think is that they would be able to have a little game of 'fanton all to themselves without disturbing anyone.

"We no want to break law," said one, "but we want to have little thing by game without policeman buttin."

It was alleged by this same Chinese merchant that Quong Gee, the keeper of the gambling house which was raided some time ago is the chief mover in the question of segregation. He was indicted by him that Gee had already taken steps towards moving all the laundries and restaurants which he controls onto the property which he is said to have secured on Namayo.

MAYOR OUTLINES POLICY OF NEW CIVIC ADMINISTRATION

SAYS ALDERMEN SHOULD PERSONALLY INSPECT ALL WORK CARRIED ON BY MUNICIPALITY—STANDING COMMITTEES FOR YEAR ARE SELECTED

The council of 1911, at its inaugural meeting last evening, signified its desire that the city's business shall be conducted upon a strictly efficient basis so far as the legislative body is self concerned. They directed the legislative committee to draw up a code of rules of procedure for the guidance of the council in its deliberations. A year of unusual activity in municipal circles is anticipated. The week is to be resumed at least during the earlier months of the year, and the practice of holding meetings each new week, it is expected, will enable the council to transact the city's business efficiently and without waste of time in futile discussion.

Last evening Mayor Geo. Armstrong presided for the first time over the deliberations of Edmonton's governing body. Five newly elected aldermen took the oath of their office. They were Aldermen Landy, McKinley, McLean, Girdlehay and Gowan, the two last named taking their places in the council for the first time.

Inaugural Address.

"Prior to the opening of the meeting for regular business, Mayor Armstrong read an address in which, after expressing pleasure that so many members of last year's council had been returned to office, he outlined the principles by which he believed the city's growing body should be governed during the coming year. It devolved upon every alderman,

Mayor Armstrong declared, to take his duties seriously and to become thoroughly acquainted with the management and operation of every civic department. It would be the duty and pleasure of the superintendents to place any desired information at the aldermen's disposal.

Members of the council should during the construction season visit the various undertakings at frequent intervals to determine that service was being given faithfully and well.

Harmony between the council and the commissioners and the heads of departments should be sought. Unless the spirit of unity prevailed, it should be the duty of the aldermen to ascertain where blame might lie, and if they would not be encroaching upon the work of the commission. Although the council was a legislative body citizens looked to the council to find remedies for ills where such existed.

"You are absolutely held accountable by the citizens," said his worship, "for a strictly business management of all the city's affairs."

He suggested that it would be wise not to undertake too large a programme of new construction during the coming year, but rather to devote attention to work already begun but still unfinished.

Steps should be taken at once to

WOMAN DIES FROM EXPOSURE

Found Dead in Shack in Eastern Part of City—Husband in Hospital

Frozen to death in the shack in which she lived at the rear of 117 Bellamy street, the body of Mrs. Kent, whose husband lies ill in the public hospital, was discovered by the city police yesterday afternoon. Drs. Braithwaite, coronor, and Woodrow, who examined the body at Connelly's and McKinley's undertaking parlors, to where it was removed, declared an inquest unnecessary, but gave it as their opinion that the woman had frozen to death on Sunday.

The body of the woman was first discovered by neighbors, who called in Rec. W. F. Patterson, pastor of the First Baptist church, of which the dead woman's husband was caretaker. Mr. Patterson notified the police, who in turn notified Dr. Braithwaite.

The body had been lying on the bed in the shack, evidently since Sunday, the woman having evidently succumbed to the intense cold of that day. The shack was poorly protected from the bitter cold, and the woman, it is stated, had gone to bed without a fire in the stove, and without proper protection from the weather.

Mr. and Mrs. Kent had lived in Edmonton for some years. Mr. Kent has been for some time caretaker of the First Baptist church, and was a few days ago taken ill and removed to the public hospital.

CALGARY MAN NOW ON TRIAL FOR MURDER

The trial will last about 10 days. There are 22 witnesses to be examined, including Fiske and Robertson. Fiske sat throughout the examination absolutely immovable.

WETASKIWIN HOTEL MAN FOUND DEAD

Death Due to Heart Failure Caused by Attack of Chronic Rheumatism

Grace Loeman, proprietor of the Wetaskiwin hotel, was found dead in bed yesterday morning. Death was due to heart failure caused by an attack of chronic rheumatism from which the deceased has been suffering for some time.

He was only three weeks ago that Mr. Loeman took possession of the hotel in Wetaskiwin which he had purchased some time previously. Before going to Wetaskiwin Mr. Loeman had been proprietor of the Royal Hotel at Chipman which he had owned for three years. Previous to that time he was a resident of Edmonton.

Except that Mr. Loeman had been suffering from rheumatism he was in excellent health up to the time of his death. On Monday evening when he was to bed he was feeling well and no one anticipated the sudden end which he met during the night.

The deceased was 42 years and 9 months old, was a native of Nebraska U. S. A. He came to Edmonton in 1901 and until 1907 resided with his brother on Namoy Avenue. His brother is the only surviving relative.

STATE WILL AGAIN TRY TO EXTRADITE

Oklahoma Wants Woman, Believed to be Accomplish of Husband's Murderer

Following the conviction of Jas. Chapman at Stillwater, Oklahoma, of the murder in 1908 of Lawrence Matthews, proceedings are to be instituted by the state authorities of Oklahoma for the extradition of Mrs. Matthews, the wife of the murdered man, for trial on the other side for alleged complicity in the crime.

The announcement appeared first in an Oklahoma paper, and this morning the Capital received confirmation of the statement that ex-Sheriff Fox, who came to Edmonton last summer to institute extradition proceedings against Chapman and Mrs. Matthews, is to be assisted with another mission early in the present year.

The attempt to extradite Mrs. Matthews failed in the Alberta courts last year, but the Oklahoma authorities now believe that they have evidence adequate to secure a decision in their favor. The proceedings will take place in Calgary.

At the conclusion of his trial in December, Chapman was sentenced to twenty-five years imprisonment for the murder of Lawrence Matthews. When the application for his extradition came up before Judge Taylor last year, an attempt was made to prove that Mrs. Matthews had entered into alibi with the colored murderer, and that the negro and Mrs. Matthews had conspired on more than one occasion to make away with the husband.

HEAVY SNOW STORM BLOCKS ALL TRAINS

Lethbridge, Jan. 4.—Railway traffic is completely blocked here today. Trains due through the night are arriving this afternoon. The big cut just across the bridge from Lethbridge has been completely filled. The Alberta Railway and Irrigation Company have sent no trains out to Coult and Cardston but have snow plows on the road. The trains can go as far as Striding, an eight train coming from Cardston get a few miles out but had to go back. The storm is all over and temperature is over forty above this afternoon.

TO HOLD RACE MEET IN MAY

Exhibition Committee Now Preparing Program for Edmonton's First Spring Meet

A big race meet, to be held on the track of the Edmonton Exhibition Association at the new grounds, on April 24th and 25th, has been decided upon by the fitting committee of the exhibition association, of which D. R. Stewart is chairman.

The committee is now considering a programme for the race meet, which is to be the first spring meet ever held in Edmonton. The programme will be published and distributed shortly. Extensive preparations are now being made by the committee for the event, and it is expected that a large number of racing men from all over the west will bring their strings to the meet.

An effort is to be made to hold at least three race meets in the coming year, something which Edmonton has not yet accomplished, but has good prospects of carrying to a success this summer.

The first of these will be held on the above mentioned dates. There will be the regular race meet in connection with the annual exhibition in August, and it is possible that a fall meet may also be held.

It has not been decided just how much money will be hung up in purses for the spring meet.

It is the intention of Manager Harrison to make an effort to have some big event take place on the new exhibition grounds very often next year, commencing with April. The stock show and bull sale, the first to be held in Edmonton, is to take place on April 27th. Then will come some race meet in May, and there will be an effort to have an athletic meet on July 1st. Then there will be the exhibition in August, and probably a race meet in the fall.

GAS ENGINE READY WITHIN SIX WEEKS

According to Expert Who Has Arrived in City to Take Charge of Plant

At least six weeks will be required for the completion of repairs to the gas plant at the power house, according to J. A. Deewester, late of the Alvis Chalmers Co., who has been engaged by Com. Boulton as supervisor of the gas plant. Mr. Deewester came into the city during the week end, and on Monday entered into the employ of the city. He will take full charge of the operation of the gas engines and producers, under the supervision of Supt. McNaughton.

In an interview with the Capital yesterday, Mr. Deewester attributed Edmonton's past difficulties with the gas plant, to the inadequacy of the old producer to meet the demands of the engines.

"I do not think that the staff of the power plant could be held responsible for the failure of the plant," he said. "From an examination of the engines I am convinced that at least a large part of the trouble was due to the fact that the producer did not generate gas in such a manner as to meet the requirements of the engines."

The result of this was that much of the product was drawn into the engine cylinders in an only partially decomposed state, and condensed in the cylinders in the form of tar."

The gas plant, upon completion, will provide an additional 750 kilowatts to the capacity of the power plant.

FIRE AT LETHBRIDGE

Lethbridge, Jan. 4.—Fire last night destroyed the shop of P. E. Crosby, shoe merchant, and Miss Coadley, milliner in the Regina block. The building was saved through somewhat damaged. Crosby's stock was valued at $8000, fully insured. Miss Coadley's loss was $200, no insurance. The loss to the building is about $1000.

EDMONTON WILL HAVE EIGHT DAILY TRAINS

EXPECTED THAT TIME, BETWEEN CAPITAL OF ALBERTA AND WINNIPEG, WILL BE CUT DOWN AT LEAST SIX HOURS

Before very many months of the new year have passed, three new passenger trains will be operating in and out of Edmonton over the C.N.R. and C.P.R., augmenting the city's daily transcontinental and southern connections over all lines, to a total of 8 passenger trains. This is only part of the railway passenger service revolution which the new year holds out in prospect for Edmonton.

By next summer Edmonton will not only be enjoying the additional service of three new dailies, but it will be privileged with daily trains over a new through C.P.R. route, direct to Winnipeg, which is at least 6 or 8 hours faster than the present C.P.R. route to the east from the city.

Another feature of the new passenger arrangements that are expected during the next few months is that transcontinental time between Edmonton and Winnipeg, is to be cut down on all roads running out of the city at least 6 hours.

New C.N.R. Daily.

Early in the year, it is expected that the new Northern Railway will take steps to establish their much-talked of second daily train out of Edmonton for Winnipeg, over the Regina route. This will give two dailies in, and two dailies out of Edmonton over the C.N.R., one by the main line and the other through by the Regina branch. It is expected that this new service may be put on within the next month or two, as the move has been contemplated for some time.

Following extensive ballasting and other improvements which have been carried forward on the main line of the C.N.R. during the past summer and fall, and which will be completed to Edmonton in the spring, it is expected that the new service will be a great improvement over the present one.

EIGHTH ANNUAL POULTRY SHOW NOW IN FULL SWING

OFFICIALLY OPENED BY MAYOR ARMSTRONG—FOWLS COMPARE FAVORABLY WITH THOSE EXHIBITED IN EASTERN CITIES—THE PRIZE WINNERS

The formal opening of the eighth annual show of the Twin City Poultry and Pet Stock association brought a large number of settlers from the surrounding districts into the city this morning. Mayor Armstrong declared the exhibition opened to the public at 11 o'clock, in a brief speech commending the excellent work which the association has carried out in the eight years of its existence in the improvement of the feathered stock of the district.

In conversation with the Capital his worship expressed the opinion that the Edmonton show would compare favorably with the exhibitions of the larger cities of the east. He was astonished at the progress that had been made within the past twelve months.

Among the visitors to the show this morning was ex-Premier Rutherford, the first president of the association, who has seen the association grow from small beginnings to its present importance. In the early days he declared to a Capital reporter, the association had had a hard struggle against heavy odds. The territorial government did not subsidize the association in those days, and the pioneers of the poultry industry suffered many losses before they were able to place the organization on a paying basis.

"When it is considered that last year over 120,000 eggs were imported into the province of Alberta, and enormous quantities of dressed fowl, it is apparent that the industry is one which should be given every encouragement," said Dr. Rutherford. "Although, as evidenced by the doubling of the number of entries and the very great improvement in the quality of the stock this year, an effort is being made to bring the supply up to an equality to the demand, a considerable time must elapse before this is accomplished."

Judging of the exhibits opened yesterday and was continued this morning by E. M. Barker of Cardston, and Jas. Shackleton, of Olds. The awards which the railway company will shortly be able to shorten their time between Edmonton and Winnipeg from the present 30 hours to 24 hours. This move has also been contemplated for some time.

Plans have been under consideration for some time which will provide for extensions to the local terminals of the C.N.R. to cost about $3000. These plans were prepared last year, and it is expected will be carried out in the coming summer. This is in preparation for the increased service which the railway company expect to establish.

C.P.R. New Trains.

Early in the year a through passenger train over the new Wetaskiwin-Hardisty-Winnipeg branch, which is the new main line from Stonyham, will be put on. This road has been completed and in readiness for some time, and only awaits the operation of the trains.

The midnight train between Edmonton and Calgary is in the spring to be made a daily, which will give the city service of three dailies over the Calgary line.

The Grand Trunk Pacific will in the spring open up through connections to Fort William over the new portion of the transcontinental recently opened from Winnipeg east. It is likely that a service will be put on through from Edmonton to the head of navigation.

When these additions to passenger service, Edmonton will be better served than any other city in the west. It will have a total of 8 daily passenger trains in and out of the city, together with the daily local that is run on the C.N.R., and the tri-weekly services that are given on the C.N.R. to Stony Plain and Morinville, and on the G.T.P. to Edson.

GHOSTLY VISITANTS ARE NOT THINGS OF THE PAST

Declares Author of "Ghostly Phenomena," Who Relates Some Experiences With Grim Spectres

London, Dec. 30.—Does the "diminished custom of telling ghost stories survive? Do spectres grim of fearful men haunt still this ultramodern earth, or have their luminous spirits been quenched with blazing publicity of the lights and scepticism?

According to Mr. Elliott O'Donnell, ghosts are still in season. He has seen them "by one to two to three," as the old asseveration goes. And in his "Ghostly Phenomena" (Werner Laurie, $100), he gives some personal experiences of lively visitants from the shades.

Some, then. The curtain are drawn about the windows, the huge piled high with glowing lozenges throws its fantastic light over the room where a semi-circle of expectant listeners are gathered to hear strange spectral matters.

Phantasms of the Living.

It seems that beside our ordinary material being we have an ever-companing phantasm, or super-physical body. This immaterial body is possible to "project," when it manifests itself, either visually or auditorily, or both, at any distance from its earth-bound partner. "The separations of the two bodies," we read, "may be done consciously or unconsciously, more often the latter, and not infrequently, too, during sleep. In fact, many cases of nocturnal hauntings have been found to be due to the phantasms of living people, who have dreamed they were visiting certain localities, and whose super-physical bodies frequently have in very truth visited the places in question, and thereby occasioned the hauntings."

The following story is given by Mr. O'Donnell as an example:

"A Mrs. Elmore, on the occasion of her first visit to Scotland, told me that the people with whom she was staying took her to see a picturesque house near Montrose. The caretaker, on opening the door of the house, turned deathly pale, and screamed out, 'God help us! If it isn't the ghost come to visit us in broad daylight!'"

"When the woman had recovered a little from her fright, she explained to me that for some months past the house had been haunted by an apparition the exact image of Mrs. Elmore. It had exactly the same face and figure, but was wearing different clothes, which clothes, however when the caretaker described them, Mrs. Elmore immediately identified with certain garments she had at home.

"She then proceeded to explore the house. It began to dawn on Mrs. Elmore that the face of the old woman was strangely familiar, and, on ascending the main staircase, she at once recognized the landing and passages as those she had been continually dreaming about during the past year. Pointing to one of the closets, she exclaimed, 'That is my favorite room with the pretty blue wallpaper, the blue carpet, and the quaint inlaid cabinet standing opposite the foot of the old oak bedstead.'

"The caretaker again almost fainted in astonishment. 'It is just as you describe it,' he exclaimed. 'The bell is in it!'"

A Phantasm of Title.

But Mr. O'Donnell has himself seen phantasms of some of his friends. Of one such personal experience he gives the following particulars:

"One New Year's Eve, a few years ago, I was at a small country station in the Midlands, waiting for the Birmingham train. As the weather was very cold and wet there were few travellers, and the platform, gloomy and streaming with water, presented a singularly forlorn and forbidding appearance. Having been confined in doors all day I was glad to snatch any opportunity for stretching my limbs, and was pacing up and down the rails when I narrowly avoided collision with a very elegantly-dressed, but unreasonably-dressed lady, about being pretty she had a decidedly intellectual face, and I was so struck with her that I admit I wheeled round with the intention of passing her again when to my astonishment there was no one to be seen, and on my inquiring both of the stationer and of the porter who the lady was I was positively asserted that no such person had entered the station.

"Some months later, when taking tea at a club in Knightsbridge, I was introduced to Lady —, whom I immediately recognized as the lady with whom I had so recently encountered the incident to her, and she laughingly told me she had never been to such a place."

A Ghostly Promise.

Ghosts that haunt houses and elac-where are generally phantasms not of the living but of the dead. Of such a spectral visitor the author tells this story:

"One of the best friends I ever had was —, who was a fellow student with me when I was reading in Dublin. He came of a very distinguished military family, and was the nephew of the Baroness B., used often to chat with her about the possibilities of the future life.

"Look here," he said to me one night, "I'll make you a promise. If anything happens to me within the next few years I'll appear to you in D.I."

"I laughingly told him I should be very pleased to see his ghost, and that I would do all I could to make it feel thoroughly at home. Some months later, 'K' went to South Africa, where he eventually joined one of the mounted police forces. One evening, when I was sitting alone in my room in D.I., suddenly felt very cold, and on glancing towards the window saw a figure standing in the recess.

"Though the figure was misty, luminous, and not at all clearly defined, I had no difficulty in recognizing it as the person to whom I had promised to appear. He appeared to be wearing a khaki uniform, which was very much torn and bloodstained. His face was deathly white and shockingly mutilated, and his eyes, which were wide open and glassy, were fixed on me with a blank stare.

"It was a horrid spectacle, and I was so shocked that I fell back in my chair, feeling sick and faint. I do not think the manifestation lasted more than a minute at the most. A few days later I read in the papers that Major Wilson's party had been ambushed and cut to pieces on the Slangani river, and among the names of the victims was that of 'K'."

The Priest in the Barrel.

A friend of the author, an artist, gives a case of the spirit of a murdered priest which haunted an old house in Birkenhead. She narrates the occurrence—the absolute fact—that she can vouch for, "as can my aunts and sisters, and as could my grandparents if they were alive"—in these words:

"The house was a very high one. It had both attics and cellars, and in one of the attics there was a bloodstained due, so I was told, to a murder of a particularly horrible nature, that had once been perpetrated there, and on account of which the house was reputed to be haunted. Rumor said that in bygone days the house had been inhabited by priests, and that it was in one of them who had been killed, his body being taken away in a barrel. In spite, however, of the bloodstain and the grim tales in connection with it, my sisters and I, at the commencement of our tenancy of the house, used to play in the attic and nothing happened.

"But at last there came a night when we awoke to the fact that there was a ghastly amount of truth in what we had heard. Some time after we had all gone to bed we were all aroused (even my practical old grandfather) by three loud knocks on one of the doors, which each of us fancied was our own. Then the door was opened, and then, from the very top of the house, where the attic was situated, a barrel was rolled down the stairs—bump! bump! bump!

"When it reached each separate landing there was a short interval as if the barrel was settling itself before beginning its next journey, and then, again bump! bump! fainter and fainter, until it reached the cellar, where the sounds ceased."

The Struggling Girl.

A strange story of an apparition endeavoring to fulfill a death-wish related to the author by an artist, a Miss Delbert. She, another artist, friend of mine, told me that she, and put up at a country hotel. Miss Delbert's bedroom was very close, the roof sloped horribly, and she adds: 'I experienced a queer shivering sensation the moment I entered it.'

She continues: 'However, overcoming such feelings, I resolved to sleep in my room, and say nothing of my misgivings to my friend.

"At two o'clock in the morning of my first night there, I was awakened by little tapings and a feeling of terror. I tried in vain to sleep, but could not, the presence of some ghost-like creature was strongly about me. I got up and looked out of my window, but saw nothing, and I was positively asserted that no such person had entered the station.

"Some months later, when taking tea at a club in Knightsbridge, I was introduced to Lady —, whom I immediately recognized as the lady with whom I had so recently encountered the incident to her, and she laughingly told me she had never been to such a place."

FRENCH MONEY IS COMING TO CANADA

Rodolphe Forget of Montreal Discusses His Recent Visit to France

Montreal, Jan. 4.—Rodolphe Forget, M. P., who returned today from a trip to Paris, stated that millions of French capital will be invested in Canada during the next few years, as the attention of French investors has been turned to Canadian securities, and Canada enjoys a high reputation amongst the French financiers. What Mr. Forget feels strongly should now be done, is for the government to appoint a first class business man as Canadian agent in the French capital.

Mr. Forget's opinion there can be no over-estimating the necessity of securing the right man for the right place, and he hopes that the government will realize the importance of the appointment they are called upon to make.

Not the Proper Place.

The aspect of no. 10, rue de Rome, where Hon. Hector Fabre was located for so many years, was not what Canada's headquarters should be. "What is now wanted," he said, "is a man who can earn $20,000 per annum and who will have a residence in Paris. I speak from the fact that when I say that the figure just given is not an extravagant estimate of the future importance of the Canadian agent in the capital of the French Republic."

Never, said Mr. Forget, was money so plentiful in France as at the present time, and it was only a few years ago that during the eleven years, the large sum of seventeen millions of francs were loaned to foreign countries, can an approximate idea of the wealth of the country be reached.

SOMEWHAT CAUTIOUS

Two Scotch fishermen, James and Sandy, belated and belogged on a rough water, were in some trepidation lest they should never get ashore. At last James said:

"Sandy, I'm fearing, and I think you'd better put up a bit of a prayer. 'I don't know how,' said Sandy. 'If ye don't I'll chuck ye overboard,' said James.

Sandy began, "O Lord, I never asked anything of ye for fifteen years, if ye'll only give us safe back I'll never trouble ye again, and—"

"Whist, Sandy," said James. "The boat's touched shore; don't be beholden to anybody."—Short Stories.

tion a word of what had happened to friend."

Night after night the sensations were repeated with ever-increasing intensity, until Miss Delbert could no longer resist the presence of a woman who appeared to be enduring the most severe mental and physical pain. "It could hardly be called a vision," continued the narrator, "bending backwards and forwards and writhing to and fro, and a deadly fear seized me lest she should clutch hold of me in the throes of agony. Once I saw her shadow on the wall. Apart from the unmitigated likeness it bore to a woman, I am sure it was her shadow, as I looked carefully about the room, removing sundry articles of furniture to assure myself the phenomenon was not due to them."

After a succession of harrowing nights Miss Delbert and her friend returned to London. Each day the friend who met another artist friend, who it appeared had also visited the country hotel from which they had just come. She had given it up very quickly as it was depressing. Upon hearing this Miss Delbert related her experiences.

"How odd!" exclaimed the other. "A girl whom I knew very well used to go very often to the hotel, and occupied the very room you slept in. She was very much attached to the place, and when she was dying in England continually expressed a longing to be there. She died in the very great agony—just such agony as that of the woman you describe—and fought against death to the very last. She was most unreserved and rebellious. I wonder if the sensations you experienced were in any way due to her?"

"I think so without a doubt," comments Mr. O'Donnell.

DEATH'S HARVEST DURING PAST YEAR

Ranks of Royalty Suffered Heavily, Chief Among Victims Being King Edward VII

New York, Jan. 4.—The harvest of death, the inexorable reaper, has been distressingly plentiful during the year 1909. With utter impartiality he has laid low his victims, without the least regard for their rank or station, their importance or usefulness in life. Without discrimination he has leveled grim tribute from high and low, leaving it to the survivors to mourn over the losses which they suffered individually or as integrals of humanity as a whole.

The ranks of royalty were invaded by death during the year just ended, the chief among the victims being King Edward VII of England. Other lesser distinguished members of royal families who died during the year were Princess Feodora, youngest sister of the German emperor, the duke D'Alencon, grandson of King Louis Philippe, and Prince Francis of Teck, brother of Queen Mary of England.

Among the members of nobility who joined their ancestors were Count Goetz von Seckendorff, at one time Grand Master of the German court; Marquis de Massa, secretary to Napoleon III; the Duke of Veragua, a direct descendant of Columbus; William Grey, earl of Stamford, and Victor, Prince d'Essling.

Heads of government were not spared by death during the year 1909. One of the earliest victims was Jose Domingo de Obaldia, president of Panama. The next to join the silent majority was Nordenskiold, formerly president of Haiti. Chile suffered a double loss by the death of its president only a few months later. One of the victims of death among the rulers on the Eastern Hemisphere was Azaad-el-Mulk, the ruler of Persia, another was Said Mohammed Rakhim Bahadur, Khan of Khiva.

Many nations mourn the loss during the year of distinguished statesmen and high government officials. The United States lost John G. Carlisle, former speaker of the House of Representatives. United States Senator from Kentucky and secretary of the treasury under Cleveland, and Charles H. Frost, formerly treasurer of the United States; also Martin Hoyt, counselor for the department of state.

Germany deplores the loss of Count Udo von Stolberg-Werneck, president of the Reichstag; England, of J. Poyntz Spencer, Earl Spencer, formerly a distinguished member of the Gladstone cabinet; Japan, that of Viscount Arakabe. Some of the great statesmen; Russia of Serge Andreievich, the list also includes Ignazio Mariscal, for thirty years head of the Mexican department of foreign affairs; Caesar Borja, a distinguished statesman of Ecuador and Boutros Pasha Ghali, the Egyptian premier, who was assassinated.

Many women destroy the beauty of their hair through thoughtlessness and ignorance of certain facts. They do not shampoo their hair often enough, or too often. They use soaps or preparations which contain ingredients harmful to the scalp and hair.

As a result of such treatment dandruff is created, the hair becomes loose, falls out, and baldness commences, unless proper and prompt precautions are taken in time. Then again, microbes and certain diseases bring about unhealthy scalp and hair conditions.

STRANGE TRAITS OF COMANCHES

When Member Goes to "Happy Hunting Grounds" Name Passes Into History

According to definitions usually advanced by the linguists and philologists generally, a "live" language is one which is changing, while a dead language is one whose form is fixed and unchangeable. On the basis of that definition the language of the Comanche Indians, declares the New York Herald, must be one of the "live" languages, for it changes so rapidly that a Comanche who has been away from the reservation for ten years would have great difficulty in understanding the language as it is spoken today.

This condition of affairs is due to the fact that when a chief or any prominent man of the tribe dies his name is never spoken again by the members of the tribe. As all of the Comanches obtain their names from objects of everyday association, this means that the words which were used in the dead chief's name are dropped forever from the Comanche vocabulary. For example, if a chief named Black Wolf were to die it would be necessary to invent new words for "wolf" and "black" to take the place of those formerly used.

This makes it necessary for a white man who has dealings with the Indians and attempts to speak their language to keep close tabs on the mortality record, as it would be gravest to him to speak the name of any deceased member of the tribe. In speaking to relatives he may refer to such a one as "your father" or "your brother," but never by name.

While this custom is used in a way to indicate that the dead man has passed out of existence completely, at the same time there is a belief among the Comanches in an existence after death, and a great anxiety in regard to the comfort of the spirits of the departed. In many cases the traders who know the Indian character have traded on their superstitions in this respect to secure the collection of debts which an Indian may have owed at the time of his death, by repeating to his children that their father's spirit is not resting comfortably because of that unpaid debt. If the representation can be put forward in a convincing way it nearly always succeeds in getting the money.

While the Comanche vocabulary is subject to great and continuing changes, as cited above, the basic form of the language, however, is practically the same and has for hundreds of years. It was through the similarity of languages that the discovery was made that the Comanches and the Shoshones of the far northwest, are really the same tribe. A young Shoshone who was in attendance at Carlisle noticed the great similarity between many of the words used by the Comanche students there, and those in his own language, and during his vacation visited the Comanches to investigate the matter.

The Lost Tribe.

It was found that the Comanches had a tradition that in one of their wars with hostile tribes, long before the advent of the white man, a detachment of their tribe had been cut off and driven north into the mountains, while the main body of the tribe had drifted south to their present location. The members of the band thus cut off were referred to as the "Lost Comanches," and were really supposed to have been annihilated by their enemies but a comparison of the traditions of the two tribes and the similarity between their customs and language showed almost conclusively that the Shoshones were really the Lost Comanches.

The Comanches of the older days were probably the most perfect specimens of physical manhood to be found anywhere in the southwest, weighing from six feet in height, and weighing from 200 to 250 pounds. Good observers claim that the tribe is degenerating physically, due in considerable measure to the intermarriage with Mexicans, who are usually of much inferior physique. In fact, it is claimed that there are a very few Comanches of absolutely pure blood to be found among the present membership of the tribe.

In spite of their bloodthirsty record in the past they are usually of a kind and gentle disposition especially in the treatment of the members of their own families. A Comanche father would never think of striking a child, but in spite of the lack of corporal punishment in the tribe the members of the tribe are usually very well behaved and obedient to their parents. Most of the children are at the government schools, where they are well fed and clothed, but if

UNCLE SAM MANUFACTURING HIS OWN PERFUME SUPPLY

NO LONGER HAS TO DEPEND UPON FRANCE AND THE EUROPEAN COUNTRIES FOR BOTTLED FRAGRANCES—CULTIVATING HOME INDUSTRY

Washington, Jan. 4.—Perfume makers of Europe are no longer in absolute possession of the trade, of the women of the United States who use bottled fragrance. The pepper, nutmeg, spearmint, and wormwood products grow in New York, Michigan, Indiana, Wisconsin, and states to the upper Mississippi valley, are now the backbone of the home industry.

Frank Rabak, expert chemical expert of the Department of Agriculture, discussing the history of perfume, today said:

"The use of aromatics and perfumery date back to the early ages when spices and other resins were obtained, many of which possessing agreeable odors, were used for the purpose of scenting. The peculiar, agreeable odors emanating from the plants growing in their native habitats may be supposed to have early attracted the attention and admiration of the primitive peoples, although it may have been known in what form plants and flowers possessed their aroma. Before the art of distillation was known, the ancient peoples used odoriferous plants and spices in their dried form for their aromatic odors. Gradually, however, the development of special utensils for other domestic purposes may have resulted in the discovery of methods for separation of odors from plant and plant products.

"The use of distilling apparatus by the ancients in their endeavor to solve the problem of transmutation of elements, and in other researches requiring the separation of volatile from non-volatile substances, antedates its use for the production of essential oils and perfumes, but it was probably learned at an early date that the odors present in plants and plants were capable of separation because of their great volatility, when compared with other constituents present. The first mention in ancient Greek writings of the separation of an odor from a crude substance is that of cedar which is separated by the crudest apparatus. This consisted of an open earthen kettle, in which the oleoresin was boiled with water, vapors of steam and oil being collected in layers from the kettle passed through the wood, which served as a condenser, and retained the oil and volatile matter. This apparatus was transformed until it consisted of two definitely related parts, the kettle or body of the still, and the removable head, which besides closing the kettle, also acted as a condensing device on account of its exposure of a large surface to the air. Further improvement was made, and the modern still of today is an adaptation of the essential principles of this apparatus.

"The possibilities for perfume manufacture in the United States," says Mr. Rabak, "are unlimited, but little has been done to promote the industry. Up to the present time," he adds, "the cultivation and perfume yielding plants has not been carried on, even experimentally, over a large part of the United States, and such work as has been done is confined to but a few kinds of plants. Until our knowledge along these lines has been much increased by practical attempts to cultivate this class of products, any statements of probabilities can be made. However, in some cases plant introductions along other lines from oil-yielding countries of Europe with information as to conditions of climate and soil in those regions give a basis for calculation in connection with these crops. The wide diversity of climates and soil in different parts of the United States, with the varying conditions of heat, light and moisture render it probable that some portions of the country will be found to be well fitted for the cultivation of perfume-yielding plants characteristic of the temperate zone. It appears probable that the conditions prevailing in those parts of Europe associated with the perfume industry can be fairly well imitated. It will doubtless require much experimental work to find the particular localities best suited to special plants."

Some work on perfume plant growing has been carried on in Florida, notably by F. Monile, of Jacksonville, whose experiment has been encouraging. Experiments by S. C. Hood with a number of oil-yielding plants in the testing garden of the bureau of plant industry at Orange City, Florida, give ground for hope that a number of plants able to endure freezing weather may be cultivated with good results. California and the arid southwest offer promising conditions for plants which will thrive in dry sunny locations. Michigan, Indiana and New York are already well-known as important centres for the production of spearmint and peppermint, while other states in the north central parts of the country form an important source of wormwood oil. Doubtless other oil-bearing plants now on trial may be found to do well in part of the same general section. American worm seed is distilled in Maryland and southward and saffron is distilled in various places, especially in the mountains from Pennsylvania southward. The spruce and white cedar, sweet orange and white cedar are derived from the more northern ranges of the Atlantic slope. The mountains of Tennessee and Kentucky supply wintergreen, sweet birch and saffron oil.

It is apparent that a number of native and introduced plants, rich in volatile oils, have already found a commercial basis in this country, and there is good ground to hope that products of this general class now obtained from abroad may in time become naturalized here.

The growth of the volatile oil industry has been rapid in Germany and France, due to the opening up of remunerative lines of work by pioneering scientific workers, and the greater demand for these products by manufacturers. Although volatile oils find much use in medicine, the greatest demand comes from the makers of perfumes and flavors. As a result of scientific research along the lines of perfume manufacture, the industry has been greatly enlarged. This mutually helpful relation between science and commerce has been conspicuously developed in France and Germany, but to a relatively slight extent in this country.

CUSHING CASE The Calgary Albertan and the Edmonton NOT A QUESTION Bulletin are going a long way out of their OF MOTIVES road to impugn the motives of the Edmonton Capital in regard to the charges made against W. H. Cushing.

Without undertaking to open up the question of motives at all, or to suggest that the Albertan and the Bulletin may have motives in supporting a man like Cushing, the Capital is here to state that even if it were shown that there are motives on the part of this paper other than a determination to drive from public life in this province a man not fit to hold an elective office, that fact could not in any way affect the situation.

Either the things which have been said against Cushing, are true or they are not. If they are true the Capital might have the most malign motives in the world and Cushing would not be one whit the less guilty.

If they are not true, why does Cushing flee from the legislature and the country, and why cannot the Albertan and the Bulletin get from him a statement of his case?

Bringing with him a wealth of experience in municipal affairs and a good practical knowledge of the workings of the civic machine, George S. Armstrong takes the mayor's chair under more favorable circumstances.

With no great problems facing the city, he accepts office at a time when the characteristics most in demand in the first magistrate is good common sense; a characteristic with which, fortunately, Mayor Armstrong is liberally endowed.

Mayor Armstrong's inaugural address is reassuring. Discarding anything suggestive of the spectacular and refusing to fall into the common error of men lately raised to position of authority of promising much, the mayor says that the business of the city this year is to take care of what it has and not wreck the chances of the future by undertaking to extend the utilities beyond their possible earning power.

This is the common sense of the situation.

Business prospects never were better in the city of Edmonton than they are at the present time. Note the fact that for two months Edmonton has stood at the head of the column among Canadian cities in the percentage of gains in bank clearings.

People who understand recognize what this means, especially in such months as November and December, when all the big cities of the Dominion are doing their biggest business. The records of the past two years have almost invariably shown western cities at the head of the list. For a long time it was Winnipeg which held undisputed priority as the city showing greatest growth of trade, held there by the unexampled prosperity of the great west. Then Vancouver jumped into first place, the great building and commercial activity promoted by the railway projects which are making the Sunbelt a great metropolis and seaport of wide importance giving it pre-eminence. Next Calgary came to the front, its remarkable showing being due to the phenomenal era of development and settlement in the winter wheat belt of the south half of the province. Now comes Edmonton and the causes are not far to seek. Edmonton has become within the past few months a railway centre from which radiating lines scatter the burden of commerce throughout an enormous area, the effect being immediately shown on the prosperity of the city, which finds its expression in the bank clearings.

Edmonton's prosperity is not a flash in the pan. It is a solid, far-reaching growth. It is here to stay, the natural result of the development which is taking place in the territory tributary to Edmonton. Every succeeding month is due to show new high levels of commercial prosperity, the direct result of the settlement and cultivation of the country to the north and west and the development of the enormous coal and timber areas tributary to this city.

The record set by the bank clearings of the past two months is a record which will be surpassed every month on the calendar for many years to come, and the percentage of gains in the months and years that are to come will not be less, but greater. Edmonton is due to head the list among Canadian cities for so long that it will cease to become even a matter of comment. For Edmonton the dawn is just breaking. What the meridian of its prosperity will bring about the most optimistic of its citizens could scarce have the hardihood to prophesy.

A BOOM WHICH WOULD BE FULLY APPRECIATED

Strathcona citizens have shown a commendable pro-Edmonton spirit of late and it is only a matter of a short time now until we will be all one happy family.

Would it not be a nice act for the new council and commissioners to make a one-fare limit for interurban street car patrons to the north side of the bridge, at least during the cold winter months.

There is no possibility that the street cars would lose a single fare.

Not one of the patrons who during the cold bleak winter climb those steps at the foot of McDougall after facing the extra cold crossing the Saskatchewan on the bridge but do so almost from necessity.

In the winter it is impossible to make that walk faster than the car goes around by Ninth street, which shows the reason for saving the fare is to save the fare.

Especially during cold days to be dropped off at the foot of the steps instead of at the south end of the bridge would be a boon that the regulars, especially the ladies, would appreciate very much.

JUST PARAGRAPHS

When a fireman wants a holiday, so the saying goes, he visits another fire hall. The Edmonton boys who race to save have not had much time to visit even their own locality.

A pitched battle in the streets of London indicates that the boys who came to the wild and woolly west in search of adventure had no idea of what they were going to miss at home.

Mr. Cushing has gone to Tennessee for his health. This seems remarkable in view of the fact that the Albertan is constantly publishing articles to the effect that the Calgary climate is the healthiest in the world. It surely cannot be that Mr. Cushing does not read the Albertan.

THE COMING WAR IN SPAIN

Since the revolution in Portugal the eyes of the world have been fixed not only upon Portugal, but upon Spain also. Will Spain follow suit? Is a revolution imminent in Spain? These are the questions often asked during the last few weeks.

Rumors and alarms fly to and fro, and the real aspects of the question are apt to be overlooked. For in Spain, the army is loyal to the existing regime, and the Spanish people, moreover, still largely sunk in apathy, is still slow to offer any but passive resistance where the demagogues would have it show rebellion.

The rural population find it impossible to live upon the soil, but this does not lead to organized and persistent riots, but to emigration, sometimes by whole villages, like sheep. If Spain were a country of populus cities, the host of the Radical Republicans that a revolution is near at hand would be well-founded.

Their supporters are to be found chiefly in the large towns; but large towns are few in Spain and the industrial workers form, roughly, but a twentieth of the whole population. It is among these that the Radical Republicans and Socialists, who now form a united party, have their adherents—at Madrid, Valencia, Bilbao, and especially Barcelona.

Barcelona is a city of unrest, the home of Republicanism, Socialism, Anarchism, Syndicalism, and other subversive isms. It is the danger-point from which a revolution is expected to spread to the rest of Spain. But in an ordinary course of events this revolution will be delayed; the strength and opportunity of the Republicans lie in unexpected, extraordinary events. Sooner or later, it may be confidently predicted, a republic will come for Spain as it has come for Portugal, although it is more than likely that it will be again a temporary republic like that of 1873.

The Spanish people, it must be remembered, is awakening from its apathy, and, being discontented, justly discontented, with the conditions of the country, under the leadership of the agitators, is looking for regeneration, not to peace and reform under the monarchy, but to the rush and turmoil under revolution. The Spaniards see a prosperous French republic on one of their frontiers, a great and prosperous Spanish republic in the Argentine, and attribute the prosperity not to such subversive causes as climate, position, energy, but to the magic word republic.

It is, moreover, in the Spanish temperament to spurn the present for the future (or the past), the practical for the imaginary and ideal; so that while one portion of the nation, in distrust of "new things" has its eyes turned to the days of the absolute monarchy and the Inquisition, the other, equally untouched by practical politics, looks to a glorious revolution to put an end to all the evils under which Spain labors.

It is but the sign of the times that the first party is growing less numerous each year, while the revolutionary party increases. Active discontent spreads from the towns to the country districts; the people, more and more lost to the influence of the church, or rather, priesthood, is incorporated in the ranks of Radicals and Socialists. Thus, in time, almost automatically, a revolution may be expected to take place in Spain.

But this gradual and calmer revolution would be hastened and brought to seething point by any untoward event in Spanish politics. The reports sometimes circulated of the King's ill-health are unfounded, and it is certain that now more than ever in his life he is precious to the peace and well-being of Spain. Upon his death there would follow a fresh period of disturbance, which all friends of Spain would deplore, since her past internal history has been that of prosperity rapidly gathering in her intervals of peace, but as soon dispersed by chronic periods of unrest.

But setting this aside as a hazy and ill-omened topic, there are three chief causes which would be likely to occasion an immediate revolution in Spain—the fall of the Senor Canejales, a war in Morocco, or a change in the attitude of the army.

The present premier claims to have raised the flag of anti-clericalism before the Radical Republicans, who would find regard it as their exclusive property, and to introduce the reforms they preach carried out by another. The religious orders are unpopular in Spain; the monks and nuns, said to number 80,000, are hated by the industrial and commercial classes. Should Senor Canejales be so promissory to introduce the next session of the Cortes, a law that would definitely bring the religious associations under civil law and regulate their number, the chances of the revolutionaries would be diminished.

It should be said to do so, they will immediately raise their favorite time-honored cry that progress is impossible under the monarchy, that the monarchy is incompatible with reforms.

The situation is the more serious because the alternative to Senor Canejales is not a conservative ministry formed from His Majesty's opposition, but rather, may be described as chaotic. The conservative leaders are hated by the Spanish people with an incredible animosity; a legend of narrow reactionary methods and blood-stained repression has unjustly gathered around them, and their advent to power would under present circumstances, cause immediate and universal protests and riots.

There is, at the same time, no Liberal statesman to succeed Canejales. He represents the most radical element among the monarchist Liberals, and has during his term of office, displayed a rare common sense and firmness of character rare indeed among Spanish politicians, so that if he is unable to carry through his policy and is obliged to resign, it is truly improbable that any other Liberal statesman would be more successful.

It is not too much to say that the fall of the Senor Canejales would entail the fall of the Spanish monarchy.

Other pitfalls are more at the mercy of sudden changes. Thus a war in Morocco would be almost certain to cause a revolutionary movement in Barcelona similar to the riots of July, 1909—riots made possible by the opening of the Melilla campaign, added the smoldering hostility toward the religious houses which abound in that city, and by organized anarchy among the workers. At Barcelona Senor Lerroux, the leader of the Radical Republicans, himself an Andalusian, has his main army of adherents in the north, and is greatly increased by an alliance with the Socialists, led by Don Pablo Iglesias. The Socialists are anti-militarists, and Senor Lerroux and others have recently been waging a war in the press against a military undertaking in Africa.

The calling out of the Reserves, necessary in the event of war, would be a signal of a rising in Barcelona and other parts of Catalonia; it is, in fact, the policy of the joint Radical Republican and Socialist party to strike when the army is engaged elsewhere. Senor Lerroux has graciously avowed this programme. Recently he has prevented a general revolutionary strike in Catalonia—but only because the opportunity was not favorable. The surging unrest at Barcelona continues beneath the surface.

A revolutionary movement in Barcelona has now even greater chances of finding echoes in other towns, where the Radical Republicans have been organizing their forces. The Republicans are aware that the army is not on their side, and since the revolution in Portugal they have been multiplying their efforts to conquer it. We hear sinister, half-suppressed rumors of tampering with the loyalty of the soldiers at Madrid, Seville, Badajoz, and Barcelona; Republican incitements to sedition sown broadcast in the barracks, meetings of soldiers in taverns held by Republicans. There are whisperings which show that agitation and distrust are the order of the day in Spain, which thus lies at the mercy of any sudden emergency.

placations, the Duke turns out to be a loyal subject and a happy marriage takes place.

CHINESE HOSTILE TO THE JAPANESE

Secret Society Being Formed to Drive Little Brown Men Out of Manchuria

Peking, Jan. 4.—"Drive out the Japanese," the watchword of a new secret society which has been formed among the Chinese of Manchuria for the purpose of resisting the aggression of the ambitious islanders. The society is reported to have ramifications throughout the whole of northern China. Rumors are current that the Chinese are causing widespread alarm and the Chinese, awakening after their centuries-long sleep, are at last taking determined steps to insure the preservation of their nationality against foreign aggression.

Stories that the Russians, on the strength of their entreat with Japan, are fortifying Harbin, have gained currency here. The Chinese government is gradually perfecting the new military organization, but the time when the empire will be able to set at defiance the Mikado's forces, is not yet come.

NAMOYO RATEPAYERS WILL MEET NEXT WEEK

Formation of Organization to Protect Interests of Property Owners Is Being Considered

A movement is on foot for the organization of Namoyo avenue property owners for the protection of their interests and the improvement of their avenue as a thoroughfare. A meeting was to have been called tomorrow evening for the purpose of forming an association, but it has been decided to leave this over until next week.

The objects of the association, as outlined to the Capital this morning by Alex Livingstone of the Caledonian store, is the general improvement of the appearance of the buildings, both at the south and north ends. In the spring it is expected that the Dr. R. Fraser Lumber Company and W. H. Cushing factory will be removed, and the property owners wish that the character of new buildings should be of the most desirable character. They will seek an improvement in the very stables and the lumber yards. The south end of the avenue is now packed up with small shacks and it is desired to replace these as early as date as possible with more substantial buildings and to make of Namoyo avenue a more up-to-date business thoroughfare.

PROTEST WINNIPEG MAYOR'S ELECTION

Petition Presented Alleges That Corrupt Practices Were Indulged in On Gigantic Scale

Winnipeg, Man., Jan. 4.—Impersonation and corrupt practices on a scale hitherto unparalleled in Canada are alleged to have been resorted to in securing the election of Mayor Sanford Evans. On these grounds a petition was formally presented yesterday, protesting the mayor's re-election.

Mayor Evans was re-elected in December on a pro-segregation platform, and it is pointed out that Ald. Adams has been re-appointed to the police committee, of which his worship is ex-officio chairman, and Magistrate T. Mayne Daly, a member.

Ald. Douglas, who replaced an anti-segregationist alderman of last year's council, Ald. Willoughby, is the only other member of the police committee. Last November Ald. Willoughby resigned from the commission, to mark his displeasure at the attitude of the other commissioners to the question of the recognition of a red light area. It is believed that his action at that time was directed against Mayor Evans, but rather intended as a means of compelling attention to the charges of corruption which were at that time in currency, but to investigate which no attempt had been made.

AT THE EMPIRE

"Hello Bill" the play that has the whole City of Edmonton talking, laughing, and holding their sides, will have its last presentation this afternoon and tonight, and there will be many regrets by all who miss this Big Laughing Hit. This is the farthest west of the Partello Co., and for the last half of the week extraordinary preparations have been going on for several weeks, so that the production of "A Royal Prisoner" will be one to be long remembered by the patrons and admirers of the Partello Co. "A Royal Prisoner" is a Romantic Comedy Drama, laid in Russia, and deals with the Empress and a young dopygode-lucky Lieutenant of the Imperial Guard. Excellent stage settings, costumes, comedy and excellent situations, makes "A Royal Prisoner" a wonderful play. A short synopsis of the play following will give an idea of this offering of the Partello Co. Sunset. Before the Military Prison overlooking St. Petersburg and the Baltic Sea. The Exile of the Duke of Conland. The arrest of Alex. Razoumowski, the young Lieut. Forbidding with the Count's wife. The prisoners meet. The duel, the escape, the surrender. Next evening, the Empress pays a visit to the fortress, disguised as a female agent, and he is ordered to the reception room in the palace of her Majesty. Childproof scenes are enacted. The Empress is informed of the Prisoner's intention to place himself at the head of the rebels. The mysterious message comes from the prisoner. The Empress tells in her with the prisoner but the message from the Duke falls into her hands and she in a rage tries to kill him. All is made up and, after ex-

THE BOY: A SOCIAL PROBLEM

(By R. B. Chadwick)

Up to very recently the boy was not looked upon as a boy, but as a man in miniature; a child in size, but an adult in conscience, desires and responsibilities. The boy was expected to be grave and silent; he was supposed to suppress the natural desires for play. He was taught that if he were given to his imagination, he was a liar of the deepest dye. He was taught, further, that he was to be held solely and personally responsible to God and man if he committed any act contrary to the notions of man, or to the laws of God as interpreted by man.

As a general rule a child, particularly a boy, does not break loose from the close authority or supervision of the mother until he is past his seventh or eighth year. It is then that he shows signs of becoming an individualist, a lover of independence, an explorer and adventurer. He is restless under restraint, but plastic in any direction under the kindly effort of one whom he knows has faith in him.

There is considerable of the aboriginal in every boy. He is fond of the hunt; games in which there is an element of danger appeal to him. It is interesting to watch how the boy will slide behind a tree, sneak out a few steps, drop behind another obstruction, then pounce upon his prey with all the grim joy of the hunter who has caught his quarry. He likes to build a hut away from the supervision of the home.

The boy is a little savage, who prefers the free, natural, simple life of his aboriginal forefathers to the ridiculous customs and conventionalities of civilization, with its regulations, unmercenary rules, brass-buttoned policemen and decent clothing. His savage instinct demands that he live close to nature; the woods, the green fields, rivers and creeks, with their swimming holes, are the natural element of the boy. His knowledge of the things of the earth is marvellous; he can trace the chipmunk to its hole, and by the tapping of two stones together capture the high-eared, tail-denzon of the forest. He is not afraid of snakes or lizards. Ground-hogs offer him but slight resistance if he can but train his faithful companion his dog, to properly attack the ground-hog when he springs the trap constructed to catch his quarry.

His social instinct makes him find expression and exercise through gang and tribal organizations. He must associate with his kind. If it is his good fortune to know a particularly athletic man, one will see him imitate the set of the shoulder, the stride and other idiosyncrasies of his hero. Slang and mannerisms of speech are picked up from unknown sources. Grammatical rules are something which he will not consider. In his eyes it is contemptible to be found in the company of girls or of boys who are under his own.

He acquires a choice selection of war-whoops, cat-calls, and battle yells, which are soon as freely pronounced by the unknown, as the "horrible noises," but to the boy they are the sweetest of music, and perfection can only be attained by constant practice in the art. The boy must show off, make-believe, assert himself, be loyal to somebody and something. He has an energy that must find an outlet; that energy he wants to direct himself. He is most sensitive as to his rights, easily insulted. The individual whose friendly desire to serve the boy prompts him to undertake the suppression rather than the leading of the boy, makes for himself a most uncomfortable life, for the boy will not be moulded by force.

Is Very Emotional.

The boy is a bundle of emotions, readily moved to tears of sympathy, readily moved on to deeds of rashness, but, to his mind, deeds of sacrifice and valor. At this period the experience of evangelistic meetings often crosses the boy's path, and when he has been tuned up to the highest pitch, decisions are called for, and the boy is occasionally led into a false position unless he is very carefully followed up and taught the meaning of his stand.

He has a creative spirit that he wants to bring into play. He builds miniature air-ships, sailing yachts; or if he lives in the west, he constructs jesses and cattle corral, he practices the tactics of the cowboy, and he carefully guards the creative spirit readily develops the bully, who uses his smaller and defenceless brothers and sisters or acquaintances as he would the herd of cattle whom he pictures himself as "rounding up."

The Canadian cities are becoming crowded. Congested districts are noticed. By-laws have been passed which decree that law and order shall rule the day, that the boy or the child shall not play upon the streets, that he must relegate himself to the limited space of a back yard, and that his swimming hole has been polluted. He finds that the insufficiency of grounds prevents him from finding an outlet for his desire to run and play; that the rules and regulations of the Park Committee prevent him from running upon the grass or climbing or following out of the park and into the woods while inside the precincts of the sacred place. He is forbidden to loiter or act in a loud or boisterous manner; he must not play ball, throw bon-fires, set off fire-works, throw snow-balls or use sling-shots. If in a moment of hilarious excitement he follows the lead of his nature and indulges in his feelings in one of his dearly beloved cat-calls or yells, he is reminded that he is within the city; that he must not disturb the cars of the nervous or eccentric individual who lives upon the street; or that he must not upset the policeman's sense of the dignity of the law.

School Room Restraint.
We find the boy in the school-room under restraint. It is impressed upon him that he must confine himself to the task in hand; that the rules and regulations established by the teacher for his guidance must be followed implicitly if painful experience is to be avoided.

He is turned loose from the school-room with his energies pent up to bursting point, and when in a moment of exuberance of spirit he leaves a practical prank or some unfortunate stone through a window or plays a game, he is pronounced "an awful kid," and is reminded that his sure end will be the reformatory. This reminder is given him so frequently that he often becomes a "juvenile delinquent" in order to save his reputation, and not displease those who have given him the name.

His desire to associate with those of his kind is suppressed by parents and teachers. For the "gang" is an unsavory word, and a frequent indication that the boy is in bad company. The problem which is facing humanity everywhere at the present time is—how to go about the civilization of the little savage whom we call "the boy." Prof. Stanley Hall, in his book, "Crime and Social Progress," refers to the ancient Egyptian lawgiver, who, under the yoke of a defiled emperor and cruel religion, became full of humility, offering everyone, becoming thoroughly indolent, for they were accustomed to act only from fear of punishment. This is the danger which is lurking behind the suppression of the natural and independent energy with which every natural boy is endowed. In the case of the natural boy, who is normal and independent, unquestioning obedience through fear of punishment begets weakness, but independent action, wisely guided and directed, makes for strength of character and true liberty-loving mind.

Parents Responsible.
Ignorant, weak or vicious parents, to whom the character and conduct of a boy is largely entrusted during the formative period of his life, hardly exercise a wise restraint upon him, with the result that with advancing years he acquires an increasing contempt for parental control. The teacher, in the overcrowded school finds it impossible to give attention and instruction, for she has to maintain a rigid discipline in his class of from forty to sixty pupils, to finish the definitely prescribed programme of studies mapped out for her by her principal or board of trustees. She frequently gains an erroneous idea of the necessity and wise purpose of discipline.

Our city fathers are constantly increasing the category of city ordinances governing the most simple actions of our citizens to safeguard the community. The police are instructed to see that these laws and ordinances are properly enforced, and offenders punished if the laws are disregarded. Unless someone takes the time to explain and discuss with him, in a manner he can appreciate, the reason for all these restrictions, the boy is more likely than the adult to acquire a contempt for law and order, and to come in a very little while a most dangerous element in any community.

Too frequently control, discipline, law and order are maintained through fear of punishment, in the shape of the parents' rod, the teacher's ruler, and the policeman's billy. The reformers are relied upon as the means to suppress any desire for independent action on the part of the boy. The result of this suppression often develops a weak, unquestioning automaton, ready submissive to any control, right or wrong, or readily developing into an effeminate little hypocrite, depending on his wits to carry him through life, or ready to become an anarchist and to declare war upon society at large, and showing an utter contempt for law and discipline. Unless society is prepared to face the child problem squarely, and to deal with it as it does with other problems, the boy will in a short time prove himself stronger than society, and will become outlawed or a criminal.

The Duties of Society.
Where the child has been robbed of substitutes in the way of play-grounds, swimming pools and opportunities for air and swimming holes, it is the bounden duty of society to provide its fairright of playgrounds, fresh sport which have been taken away by the introduction of factories or of mercantile establishments. The community whose shortsighted policy overlooks the rights of the children to grow up to be clean, healthy, strong-bodied citizens, with minds which reverberate with the health and cleanliness with which their bodies have been surrounded, is making a most serious mistake, as that community will pay the toll in crime, debauchery and misery through many years, or until such time as it awakes to the necessity of providing for its youth the playgrounds, the social centres and the appliances necessary for the successful training of children into lives of citizenship, other problems, the boy will in a short time prove himself upright and honest.

The opportunities which the boy offers to the local philanthropist in the way of investment are almost unlimited. The return cannot be estimated. The providing of club buildings wherein boys may meet together under proper direction, where they may gain habits of industry, and where they may gain habits of industry, and where they may follow out their own desire to construct, will bring returns in future years which cannot be estimated in dollars, but which will show themselves in the character and manliness of the rising generation.

EASTERN ATHLETICS COMMENCED TO MOVE

every club in city, town and village, have drawn up their rounds for the chief curling trophies, and from now on, the rinks will nightly resound with the care free notes of the enthusiastic "stane" followers.

Sating Championships

For the first time for a number of years, the annual sating championships will be held in Canada, the Northern New York States having been favored with these events for the past few years, even though the Canucks have always been to the fore in this line of sport. The spacious ice surface provided by the M. A. A. open air rink will give a track that is about five laps to the mile, the biggest on the continent, while coming in the midst of the winter carnival that is planned for the Metropolis in February, ensures a good attendance. The Lamy Brothers have entered, the Saracene Lake boys being great favorites on this side of the line.

A great change has come about in Eastern Canada bowling circles and to the introduction of the mineralite, Tifco and rubber bowling ball is attributed the reasons for the remarkable increase in the individual and team totals that have been hung up recently. Three years ago there was not a mineralite ball east of Toronto. The visit of the Ottawa team to Detroit and New York, and the "private" mineralite bowling spheres that these men brought back inaugurated the movement which has assumed stupendous proportions. Nearly every bowler of any calibre in the East now owns his private ball, and even the public alleys are supplying their patrons with these more modern balls. Well known bowling stars state that their scores have jumped anywhere from twenty to forty pins on each string, the penetrating effect of the mineralite and tifo being much greater than the wooden ball, while the former have less tendency to get loosed, or in any way change their course while on the alleys, a feat so common to the wooden pins.

WALKER STUMBLER

Failed to Take Century Championship from Jack Donaldson at Johannesburg.

Johannesburg, S.A., Jan. 4.—A 100 yard dash between the South African sprinter, Jack Donaldson and R. E. Walker was spoiled today when Walker, at 60 yards stumbled and fell. Donaldson's time was .95 seconds, only a quarter of a second slower than his world's record. The race was for the professional championship, and the holder had a slight lead when Walker dropped out.

FISTIC FODDER

Packey McFarland and Harry Trendall of St. Louis will undoubtedly meet in Pittsburgh, Jan. 5.

Pat Moran received a set back at the hands of Tommy Langdon that will not do him any good.

Jimmy Johnston, manager of Owen Moran, who is in Boston, has promised Alex. McLean, manager of Matty Baldwin, that if Moran defeats Wolfgang, Baldwin will have the first chance at Moran.

Jack O'Brien, of Philadelphia, will run a 600 amateur journey in the spring.

Frank Hays troubles back from a chance at the title unless he can whip a man like Hugo Kelly. It took the late Ketchel three rounds to get Kelly.

Jack O'Brien has been buying for some time. Now Al Kibicki, from his win over Kid Condon would like to meet O'Brien.

Larry McLean says that if he ever retires from baseball he will join a fire department. He could do great service by impersonating the book and ladder.

"Shoveling snow is great exercise for a fighter," said Jimmy Dunn, manager of nine Cleveland boxers. "I had my boys shovel snow from my friends' front walks, and would be glad to have them clean the walks for other people."

STARS DISCOVERED; MEREST ACCIDENT

Some Baseball Players Who Were Lucky to Ever Get Before the Public

Some of the greatest ball players the game has ever known have been discovered by accident, or through sheer luck. And this statement is the cruelest thing you know. Five players have been picked at random, but they stand among the best the game has ever known, just to show the truth of the above assertion.

The men are the late Ed DeLahanty, probably the greatest and undoubtedly the hardest hitter who ever put on a pair of spangled shoes; Amos Rusie, who many believe was the greatest pitcher ever in the game; Hans Wagner—by the way, his proper name is John Paul Wagner; Omer Bush and Ty Cobb.

Amos Rusie began his ball career with the old Grand Avenue team in Indianapolis, when Indianapolis was a member of the Old Twelve Club National League. This was back in the eighties. Rusie was a pitcher, a powerful husky young giant, who had a world of speed and a dazzling array of curves. The Grand Avenue had one large picnic with the other teams in the old Indianapolis City League when Rusie pitched.

Glasscock Discovers Rusie. Jack Glasscock was playing shortstop on the Indianapolis National League team at that time, and Jerry Denny was holding down third base. Glasscock was captain of the team. He heard of Rusie's pitching, and one Sunday took Denny and him out to the City League Park, where Rusie played. Glasscock watched the youngster work, and both he and Denny were so impressed that Rusie was taken down town after the game.

The next day Rusie appeared at League Park in an Indianapolis uniform. The story of his career in the big league is now baseball history, known to all fans. Rusie was a wonder, but his bad habits put him out of the game when he should have been in his prime. He is now living at Vincennes, Ind., working in a lumber yard and dredging for mussel shells in the Wabash river.

Ed DeLahanty, the greatest of the DeLahanty ball-playing family, began on the lots around Cleveland, his home city. In 1886 some one told the manager of the Wheeling, W. Va., team that DeLahanty was a great ball player. Some days later DeLahanty received a letter offering him a trial with the Wheeling club.

The youngster didn't have any money and no transportation was enclosed, but he started for Wheeling and made his way there by riding freight trains and walking. He was an underdog, playing second base, and he made good from the jump. In 1887 Philadelphia decided to give him a trial, and along in the fall of that year DeLahanty made his major league debut, succeeding Basin, one of the greatest players of his time, at second base.

Get Off to Bad Start.

As a big league second baseman the man who was destined to become a terror to the best pitchers the game has ever known was not a brilliant success. Neither did he shine with the bat in his first year, as his average of .26 games was only .227. In 1888 he played in 54 games and soaked the pill for a grand average of .292. He alternated between second base and left field, and in 1890 he went to left field and remained there until his tragic death.

Hans Wagner owes his start in baseball to his brother, Al Wagner. Al was a good ball player, but every one thought Hans was too awkward to ever amount to anything on the diamond. Al was with St. Louis, owned and managed by George Moreland at that time, and Moreland wanted a pitcher.

"Get my brother," said Al. "Can he pitch?" Moreland wanted to know.

"Well, he can throw a ball mighty fast," Al replied, and Hans was sent to Carnegie to report. His salary was to be $35 per month. Wagner beat his way from Pittsburgh to Steubenville on a freight train.

Frank Bowman was catching for Steubenville and Claude Ritchie also was a member of the team. Wagner pitched the first game, but after that they put him in the outfield. His first year was so big it was impossible to get a pair of baseball shoes in Steubenville to fit him and the greatest ball player of all times played his first league engagement in his bare feet.

Hans Goes to Short. The Steubenville team blew up. Mansfield wanted Al Wagner, and wired him at Steubenville. Al had another job, so he sent his brother. Mansfield wanted a shortstop and, while he had been playing the outfield, Hans switched to short. He made good.

Later the Wagner brothers went back to Moreland at Wheeling, W. Va., and then were sold to Captain Kerr, at that time owner of the Pittsburgh club.

Ed. Barrow was then managing the Patterson, N.J., team and he wanted Wagner. Kerr thought to make a deal, but when Barrow explained it was Hans Wagner he wanted, Kerr presented him with the Flying Dutchman. Wagner made his big hit right there. Pittsburgh tried to buy him back, but he was sold to Louisville, and he broke into the big league with Fred Clark in the Falls City. Al Wagner is now managing Wagner Bros. circus, while what Hans is doing is something every baseball fan knows better than any writer could tell.

In 1904 Ty Cobb was beginning for a chance with the team at his home town, Augusta, Ga. Co. Struthers was managing his team. Struthers gave Ty a chance, and Ty was canned when he jumped into the air while running bases, knocked down a ball which had been thrown to catch him and was called out for interference. He drew his release about ten minutes later.

Makes Good This Time.

The next year Cobb got another chance with Augusta and he made good. Owing to an arrangement Augusta had with Detroit, whereby the former team was permitted to use pitcher Eddie Clossie, with the understanding Detroit was to get a good man at the end of the season. Cobb became a Tiger in the fall of 1905.

In 1906 he didn't show any too much class and in the spring of 1907 was offered to Cleveland for Elmer Flick, because the Detroit people said he was a disorganizer. Cleveland refused to make the trade. Flick Cobb is the real sensation of the American league.

THE STERILIZED SCHOOL

(J. W. Foley in Life)

The walls and the ceiling they're scrubbing. They're scrubbing the woodwork and floors; A stream on the blackboard is playing. They're holling the desks and the doors. The old water pail has been scalded. A cup for each lassie and lad. And not one may drink, as we all did. From that old tin dipper we had. They've cleansed every pointer and ferrule. The inkwells are scrubbed out with lye. The books and the slates are made sterile. The old well is filled up and dry; The girls have to wear, willy-nilly, A button that tears the hold sign; "The lips that touch germs or bacilli Are lips that will never touch mine."

The dunce cap is boiled every morning. (They're the individual kind). The front door is set with this warning: "Who enters here leaves germs behind." No apple is smuggled for sharing. As was in the school days of yore. Until they've made sterile the paring. And quite disinfected the core.

Alas! the old pump is discarded. And gone in the flight of the years. The new drinking fountain is guarded. By the Anti-Germ Grenadiers! The vines from the windows they're stripping. Lest germ-breeding insects might stay. The eaves and the rafters are dripping. All wet with a sterilized spray.

Oh, come in the joy of the morning. What secrets of school days we'll tell! That disinfecting vapor gives warning. That teacher is blowing the bell. It's time for the B class in scrubbing. The A class is set out to cool. From its recent boiling and scrubbing— Three cheers for the Sterilized School!

BURIED BY ROCK SLIDE.

Calgary, Jan. 2.—O. M. Johnson, 63 Saturday was buried under a rock slide at the power dam near Kananaskis. He was working under a rock dump, when a shot was fired, and the slide he was buried in a pool in the river.

EXPLOSIONS ARE NOT DUE TO BAD POWDER

Secretary Meyer Says That Statements of Sir Hiram Maxim Were Unwarranted

Washington, Jan. 4.—Statement made by Sir Hiram Maxim, who wrote President Taft on October 25 that no explosives in the United States army and navy were due to the form of powder grain in use, were characterized as "unworthy of serious consideration" in a letter to the president from Secretary of the Navy Meyer, made public to-day.

Appended to Secretary Meyer's letter was a memorandum from Brigadier General William Crozier, chief of ordnance, United States army, to the secretary of war, stating Sir Hiram Maxim's criticism, as well as an article in Engineering, a London periodical, frequently referred to by Sir Hiram Maxim.

"It is considered," says Secretary Meyer, "unwarranted to carry out further experiments desired by Sir Hiram Maxim, and his statements in relation to our smokeless powder are unworthy of serious consideration, except as to their misrepresentations and to the evil effects of their wide publicity on those unacquainted with this subject."

Says Maxim is Ignorant.

In regard to Sir Hiram Maxim's statement that he has had great experience and knows what he is talking about," Secretary Meyer says Sir Hiram Maxim "is ignorant of the type of smokeless powder used by the United States government and it is quite probable he had very little or no experience with it, however familiar he may be with nitroglycerine or cordite powder grains."

The letter also declares that although Sir Hiram Maxim claims to be the inventor of the type of smokeless powder, it was developed by the United States navy at the royal cordite station Newport, R.I., and has been used by the naval service since 1899. The broad statement of Sir Hiram Maxim, "I am convinced that the United States navy are due to multi-perforated powder grains, is shown to be untrue from evidence not at all connected with the details of the grain. When the composition of the powder and the details of the grain are considered there is additional evidence to show that these elements are not at fault."

Powder Not at Fault.

"Not in one case," says Secretary Meyer, "has the evidence of the occurrence showed that the smokeless powder in use at the time of the explosion was at fault in any degree."

Brigadier General William Crozier's memorandum supports the contention of Secretary Meyer with regard to military experiments with smokeless powder. It is indicated that since the introduction of a smokeless-powder in the military service but one large gun has burst and only two or three of the field gun accidents being ascribed to other causes.

THE WAYS OF THE NEW PICKPOCKET

Smooth Dips Ploy Their Trade in Busy Shopping Season to Advantage

New York, Jan. 4.—Have you ever had your pocket picked?

As the busy season for crooks has just passed, a few examples of their methods may serve to save you from becoming their victim.

Mr. Westside for instance, finds himself headed for Brooklyn. With everybody trying to board the same "L" train at the same moment, two men just ahead of him start a wordy dispute. He watches expecting to see words become blows, and forgets his own troubles. The man on his right is also interested and adds to the jocundness of the occasion by roundly cursing the B. R. T.

When Mr. Westside finally jams his right hand a seat he reaches for his watch to figure just how late he will be and finds his pocket empty. But he does not connect his loss with the two men who started the delay. He would not find them on the train anyhow. With his property they are still on the Manhattan side—leaving fresh victims behind.

The Girl Who Reads-in-the-Car is all but carried past her corner. She springs to her feet, shoulders her way out and lands on the crossing. She chooses her book, makes sure that her hand is straight and her bare feet tight; then glances down at her handbag and every vestige of color fades from her face. It is Sunday night and the little yellow envelope contains her week's wages has been nearly

AUSTRIA IS ARMING; ITALY IS ON GUARD

Fears Entertained on Both Sides of Frontier That Old Feud May End in War Which Will Result in Downfall of One Nation

Vicenza, Jan. 4.—Ardoluke Franz Ferdinand of Este, backed by the energetic Field Marshal Krobath (who probably will soon be Minister of War), is planning a reorganization of the Austro-Hungarian army. The service term will be shortened from three to two years; the annual recruiting contingent will be raised to 105,000; and as a result the army's peace strength will amount 330,000 instead of 390,000 men.

The delegations have not yet voted the necessary money, but there is little doubt about it. And behind these preparations come four Dreadnoughts, two already under way.

These facts are signs and portents. Most portentous of all is the magnetic, aggressive figure of Foreign Minister Aehrenthal, who stands behind the preparations. And everywhere Austria is drilling, mustering, shooting at targets and dragging siege guns to the tops of towering mountain peaks. It is a sudden return to the heights of power when Austria occupied in the mid nineteenth century when she humiliated Prussia at Omuiz.

Only Quarrel With Italy.

Against whom are the martial preparations made? The answer is reached by a process of elimination. Not against Russia. Russia in the view of the central European powers, is crippled for two decades.

Similarly Austria is not arming against Turkey, for Turkey, if not already in the triple alliance, is near it; and after the brief dispute over Bosnia it has become the settled policy of Austria and Germany to back Turkey up.

With one European power alone has Austria a solid and serious dispute. That power is her ally, Italy. Statesmen put a phrase: "The basis of Italy's claim."

Italy's Vigorous Propaganda.

As preparation for war Italy is vigorously propagandizing in the Adriatic provinces. She does this through the "Society of Dante Alighieri," a tremendously powerful organization which works hand in hand with the Austro-Italian "Legazione Nazionale Italiana." Both societies combat Austro-German influences and, indeed, preach an anti-German crusade. The choice of Dante's name for such a purpose for Dante was a steadfast Ghibelline and a supporter of the power of the German kaisers in Italy; and, indeed, in his "Purgatorio" he depicts the city of Rome as weeping for these kaisers.

Statesmen Want No War.

Austrian and Italian statesmen want no war. Both are driven to arm by historical forces which are infinitely stronger than their good intentions. To conceal this disagreeable fact they parade the conciliatory comedy of Austro-Italian love and affection as partners in the triple alliance. Thus Marquis di Son Giuliano, Italy's foreign minister, last September called on Count Aehrenthal at Salzburg and was graciously received by Kaiser Franz Joseph at Ischi. After a month's delay Count Aehrenthal went to Turin and returned the visit. After both meetings semi-official statements affirmed that relations were cordial.

At one time it was widely admitted there had been friction. Austria had thought of marching to Saloina, and Italy of seizing Albania. But the relaxed from the bag which hangs open. She does not connect her loss with the round-faced, nuttily-looking woman who sat on her left. This woman's left hand was needed to keep her hand of bundles in place, but the right might have been very busy under the shadow of the bundles and girl's book. Mrs. Martlet picks over remnants in a department store and chats with the affable young woman who complacently because change is made so slowly. Mrs. Martlet moves on to another counter and starts to pay for her purchases, only to discover that her handbag is empty. She does not connect the disappearance of her purse with the young woman who found fault with the service. Even if the young woman again and accused her of a recent would reveal nothing. Long before the second meeting the young woman has passed the purse to her "stall," or partner in the trick who has made his "get-away" leaving no proof of guilt on the girl who goes on making small purchases.

The citizen from the Bronx joins the line passing a box office window. All around him is the usual Broadway theatre-crowd. A trio of young chaps, making a flying wedge and shooting past him, cause him to make an uncomplimentary remark about the present day college youths. A well-dressed man behind him echoes the remark, steps on his heel, apologizes and vanishes. When the man from the Bronx reaches the window he has no money with which to buy tickets. He looks at his watch. It is the "college boys" and the well-dressed man who apologized so politely have made off.

EAST HALF SECTION 7, Tp. 53, Range 14. This land is just four miles north of Vegreville, and under the present dynasty alone, but for much longer than the period represented by Mauch occupation of the Dragon Throne—an effective barrier between the people and the throne. One of recent years have the people understood this, perhaps only a small proportion realize it now; but the price recent knows this and understands that the representative movement, even if its culmination should curtail many of the prerogatives of the throne, can be utilized to strengthen the hold of the dynasty upon the people, and thus save the dynasty.

It is good policy. The recent has so far played his end of the game well. From the first meeting of the Tzu-cheng Yuan it has been his policy to take full advantage of this body.

Her Face and Body Were Littered Covered With "BOILS."

Burdock Blood Bitters Cured Them.

Mrs. John H. King, Johnston, N.B., writes: "I was very much troubled with boils, and my face and body were literally covered with them. A friend advised me to take Burdock Blood Bitters. I got three bottles, and before I had taken all the first one my boils began to go away. I had just taken a few doses out of the last one when they all disappeared. My husband has also used Burdock Blood Bitters with much benefit."

Boils in themselves are not a danger, so very trouble, but still, at the same time, they are bad, and, to get rid of them it is necessary to put the blood in good condition, and for this purpose there is nothing so equal to old and tried remedy, Burdock Blood Bitters.

CHINA IN FAVOR OF PARLIAMENT OLD SYSTEM IS SWEEP AWAY

PROPOSED NEW NATIONAL ASSEMBLY HAS BECOME A MOST POWERFUL WEAPON IN HANDS OF THOSE WHO ARE FIGHTING FOR REFORM OF MEDIEVAL SYSTEMS IN THE CELESTIAL EMPIRE

Peking, Jan. 4.—China is keeping pace with the rest of the world in this aviation age, but here it is events, not men, that have been moving on wings and at bird speed. Not all events, not often the expected, but some, and these of highest importance in their bearing upon national affairs, particularly upon the greatest of national affairs—reform.

This has not pleased the System. Heretofore the throne has followed its advice alone, and has stood by the provincial officials, who constitute the System's hold upon the provinces. One result of the regent's tactics has been that the fight of the people has been cleverly diverted from the throne to the System, which now finds itself somewhere between the devil and the deep sea.

The case with which the Tzu-cheng Yuan has gained its present supremacy is due to the fact that the System was wholly unprepared for the strength, the vigor and unity of purpose manifested by that body, particularly in forcing upon the throne the issue of early opening of parliament.

The System did not expect to hear of this question. It had, its opponents thought, been effectually "scotched."

The young men who had conducted the agitation outside the assembly hall had been turned down, and officials felt confident in its ability to keep the question from consideration by that body. Their confidence was based on the assumption that the Tzu-cheng Yuan had been so carefully packed with government representatives that it would do nothing to supinely follow the government's lead.

The truth is, a very large proportion of these were not defused to oppose, but joined actively in the agitation, so that when the final vote was taken there was absolutely no sentiment of an inertia to give the system an excuse for opposition.

The defeat was so full and complete—and humiliating.

I have witnessed no more inspiring scene than the Tzu-cheng Yuan debate over early opening, and the magnificent display of enthusiasm which greeted the unanimous adoption of the resolution providing for a memorial to the throne. The Chinese are excellent speakers; their language lends itself to flights of oratory. There was, however, no wasting of time over say nothing oratory that day.

The tension was high, but the proceedings were in perfect order. One leader after another set forth in the most forcible speech the reasons for advocating an early opening. The two or three hundred Chinese who around me in the galleries hung upon every word had great difficulty in restraining themselves. These were the young men who have been the leaders in the agitation and the fate of the resolution meant much to them; they well understood, however, that any demonstration on their part might lead to trouble, not only to themselves but perhaps for the whole movement.

But when on the rising vote it was seen that not a single member opposed the resolution the applause that burst forth from the dome found a ringing echo from the galleries. Again and again the members of the assembly jumped to their feet in unison and gave cheer upon cheer. Ordinarily the Chinese are not a demonstrative people, but there was nothing permanent about the demonstration.

Cheer after cheer—all for China!

The vote taken that day was epoch-making, but the unit of action which brought it about and the enthusiasm ringing through these cheers were of even greater significance.

I have written of this as marking a new nationalism in China. I call it "new" because it has existed heretofore nobody seemed to realize the fact. Not foreigners alone, but the Chinese themselves, have thought that differences in provincial interests would prove so great that unity of action in the Tzu-cheng Yuan would be practically impossible. The system had counted with confidence upon this assumed incapacity for co-operation playing into its hands.

Let's pull taffy, that's the thing; Old time taffy pull—i-jing! Let's set here and see it rise. Where before before our eyes? One-two-three, with shaded street. When the bending maples meet. In the summer, green and cool, Forming shadows, like a pool, For the dusty highway there. Sweet with balsam-perfumed air.

Go in to be at some old place 'Bout to-morrow night; with Grace Jones a'comin'; Jenie, too, And some girl that's sweet to you. Meet at eight o'clock, on time, Old stove hot and lasses prim; Real old dark-hued syrup that boils. 'Tis now just right and never spoils, Turnin' back to sugar when you say. You pour it in the pans, di-pee!

Let's go down and fire the swirl, With an apron, like a girl; Dust your hands with flour, a stick Way of helpin' 'em not to stick. When you take the taffy hot, From the pan there on the spot, 'An' go circin' round the room. While your cheeks are red with bloom. Of the warm work, and the grace Of sweet lips and smile-like face.

Not much chance, you think at first, Of its gettin' white; the worst Dab y'u ever seen, y'u say, But y'u keep on pullin' away; Keep on walkin' and talkin' talk. Of old customs as you walk; Showin' your neighbors, yours, to see 'An' his white as ought to be, 'An' the seed the chance to say. Things y'u've tried for many a day.

Every-body's a pullin' their best Tryin' to finish alone the rest, Some get white as snow, an' sum Stay just like it was, by gum! But the fun's all yours the same, Just one even an' regular flame. Leapin' in hearts of simple life, In that dear world far from strife, Where the bawniest dreams still swing.

And the loved lips loved words sing. Let's pull t

BUILDING INSPECTOR'S ESTIMATE CRITICISED

Ald. Miller Would Like to Know if Department 1 is Construction Company—Estimates All Aboard

"The increase of over 100 per cent in the estimated expenditure of the building inspector's department in 1911, as compared with 1910, was the occasion of a piquant discussion in the council last evening. Ald. Miller and Mould expressed themselves as of the opinion that the building inspector should confine himself strictly to the inspection of buildings under construction, unless it were definitely understood that this duties were more comprehensive. The actual expenditure of the building inspector's department last year was $3,677.55, $335 in excess of the estimate. This year's estimated expenditure was $7,835, and the estimated surplus $4,655. Ald. Hyndman thought that the department should be a self-sustaining basis.

"If the building inspector's department is a construction company," Ald. Miller declared, "we ought to know about it."

The public works committee was instructed to draw up a report, defining the duties of the building inspector. On the committee are Ald. Miller, Mould and Grindley.

The estimates tabled last evening for the civic departments other than the building department, show a total estimated expenditure for 1911 of $398,450.61 and an estimated revenue of $114,745. Last year the estimated expenditure in these departments was $301,325.88, and the actual expenditure $302,356.54.

LOCAL ARCHITECTS WILL BE ASKED TO PREPARE PLANS

For Stock Pavilion and Other Exhibition Buildings Which Will Be Erected Next Spring

Competitive plans from the local architects are to be called for very shortly by the Edmonton exhibition association, for the construction of the $200,000 stock pavilion which is to be erected on the new exhibition grounds this coming summer.

It is the intention of Manager Harrison to have plans complete for all intended improvements and buildings, in readiness to call for tenders by February 20th. This will include the stock pavilion, the manufacturers' building, the additional stock buildings, and the subway to be constructed under the track.

Work is to be commenced as early as a date as possible. Construction will probably be commenced on the subway early in the spring. The other buildings are to be completed in time for the annual exhibition in August.

APPLYING FOR PERMITS TO CUT GOVERNMENT HAY

Twenty-Five Applications Have Been Filed at Dominion Land Office During Past Two Days

In two days something like 25 persons have applied at the local Dominion land office for permits to cut hay on government land.

Applications are allowed to be made each year after the first of January until the first of April, after which permits are issued. Hay is not allowed to be cut until July 25th.

Should more than one person file applications on the same quarter section, the land office notifies these persons and they are asked to get together in an effort to arrange satisfactorily as to how much each will cut. If they cannot agree, no permit is issued, but the land dept. calls for tenders for the cutting of the hay on that particular quarter.

Applications may be filed after the first of April, but applicants after that date must take secondary place to any applicant who already has been issued a permit to cut hay on the particular piece of land for which the second application has been made.

Applicants make declarations as to how much hay there is on the particular quarter on which they wish to cut, and apply for permission to cut so many tons, paying to cents per ton for the permit.

DEMAND FOR LIGHT AND POWER IS INCREASING

Amount Used in December Dances Records for Corresponding Month in Previous Years—Plant Rushed

In consumption of electric light and power December last shows an increase of over twenty-five per cent, as compared with the corresponding month in 1909. The consumption in December, 1909, was 30,000 kilowatt hours, in round figures, and the consumption last month, 41,000 kilowatt hours.

The peak load, which was experienced during Christmas week, was 16,000 kilowatts, a forty per cent increase over the peak load of 1909. Throughout the week preceding Christmas this heavy load was almost continuously maintained, and although one unit of the lighting plant was temporarily out of commission, the week was passed without any serious difficulties of operation. Both of the high speed engines which were in use carried continuous overload over a long period during Christmas week.

The repairs to the Robb engine will not be completed for a month, but now that the period of heaviest loads has been passed, it is not anticipated that any difficulty in the operation of the plant will occur.

The power consumption by the street railway in December, was greater by nearly 75 per cent than the consumption in the operation of the system, as compared with 139,000 in December, 1909.

ARC LIGHT DEMANDED

Application will be made by the city commissioners to the railway commission, for an order to compel the Edmonton, Yukon and Pacific Railway to install and maintain, or at least to maintain an arc light at the intersection of the company's tracks with First street, near the foot of the hill. The crossing is considered a dangerous one to pedestrians after nightfall, in its present unilluminated condition.

NEWS FROM THE SISTER CITY

SECOND BIG DAIRY BEGINS BUSINESS

Management Has Installed High Grade, Costly Milking Machine—First in Province

Strathcona, Jan. 4.—A strong competitor to the Edmonton City Dairy in Twin City business was started yesterday when ex-alderman J. Donnan, of the Donnan Lumber Co., opened his large dairy in the east end for retail work. Wagons were started in both Strathcona and Edmonton and a promising amount of patronage was received on the first trips.

Mr. Donnan has engaged for several years in the dairy business but heretofore has disposed of his large output of milk to the Edmonton City Dairy. His large stable across Mill Creek are model buildings for the purpose and have been brought up to the present state of up-to-date efficiency at heavy expenditures. This dairy is the one which received the highest recommendation for cleanliness and equipment in a recent report of the Edmonton inspector.

The Donnan Dairy starts delivery with the product of thirty cows and a feature of the dairy work is the operation of a very costly milking machine, probably one of the best of the very few in the province. This machine was installed one year ago. The pastures of the Donnan farm are some distance southeast of the city on Mr. Donnan's farm where ample feed for the winter is raised.

Last Night's Curling. The following games were played last night in the Strathcona curl series: Loughlin 17, McWhitney 2. Kelly 12, Ritchie 0, (default).

McLean 13, Bradshaw 7. McMahon 11, Davies 8 (12 ends.)

The schedule last night was somewhat disarranged in this series owing to a couple of rinks going to the Fort for the bonspiel which opens their today. The two rinks were fairly strong ones and should get within the prize money. The rinks that will represent Strathcona are, Pollard, Miller, Farncomb and Bowen, skip; Gallagher, Congdon, Belanger and Sheppard, skip.

MANAGER OF HUDSON'S BAY STORES RETIRED

Robert Goldsmith, Eight Years in the Company's Employ, Will Engage in Business for Himself

Robert Goldsmith, for eight years manager of the local stores of the Hudson Bay company, has withdrawn from the company's employ. He will enter business for himself in the city. Mr. Goldsmith's withdrawal occasioned considerable surprise in the stores. He has made a reputation as a keen business man.

Mr. Goldsmith came originally from Hanover, Germany, where he learned the dry goods business, which he has followed for twenty-two years. He followed his trade in Ontario for some years, and afterwards came to Manitoba where he entered the employ of the Hudson Bay company. He came to Edmonton nine years ago.

SETTLERS IN GRANDE PRAIRIE DISSATISFIED

Over Fact That Wagon Road to the North Was Not Completed Last Month As Promised

Geo. M. Smith, brother of Dr. H. R. Smith, of Edmonton, who with his four sons will farm 2,000 acres in the Grande Prairie returned with two of his sons from the north, last night, after spending the summer and autumn there.

Mr. Smith stated that the settlers in Grande Prairie were dissatisfied over the fact that the new Grande Prairie road was not yet completed, since they had been given assurances by Premier Sifton that the road would be completed by December.

Mr. Smith started to come out by the new road, but stated that when he got to Sturgeon lake, he could find no trace of where the government road had been cut through, and no one knew anything of it. He had to turn and come out by way of the old route, round by Lesser Slave lake. Many settlers, he stated, had tried to find the new road, but had got lost. Mr. Smith stated that he would return by the old route when he went north again in the spring.

Mr. Smith and his sons have taken up nearly 2,000 acres between them in homestead and strip, and will go into mixed farming on a large scale. He has great faith in the future of the Grande Prairie country in mixed farming.

WETASKIWIN MAN INVESTS IN S'CONA

Purchases Sixteen Lots in Garneau Subdivision—Will Erect Handsome Residence

Strathcona, Jan. 4.—Another palatial home will be added next summer to the growing group of handsome residences in proximity to the University grounds in the Garneau addition, when ex-mayor W. J. McNamara of Wetaskiwin builds on his property recently acquired in the west end. Through the realty firm of J. G. Tipton and Son, Mr. McNamara last week purchased sixteen lots in Garneau admirably situated on Eighth avenue and it is upon this property that he plans to erect a home during the present year which will cost between $15,000 and $20,000. When this residence is completed he will remove to Strathcona to reside.

Mr. McNamara has for years been closely identified with the growth of Wetaskiwin and is well known for his dealings in Alberta realty. He is president of the newly organized Western Townsman in his city offices in Edmonton. Mr. McNamara recognized the value of investment in Strathcona but is decidedly in favor of amalgamation between the two cities.

Strathcona Locals.

The annual meeting of the Strathcona Katepeter's association is called for Thursday evening in Isabella's hall. Election of officers for the new year, and other important matters will occupy the attention of the meeting.

Dr. A. B. Ritchie, late of Toronto University, has returned to his home city and will settle here for the practice of his profession as a physician and surgeon. He makes the ninth doctor now engaged in active practice in Strathcona.

The Local Council of Women will meet next Monday at 3 p.m. in the city council chambers. A cordial invitation is extended to all women who are interested in the work of the council.

Undertaker Taylor yesterday conducted the funeral of the infant child of Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Malone, who reside on 1st avenue north in the east end. The little one was one year and a half old. Burial was made in the Edmonton cemetery.

The first death to occur in the city hospital for several weeks took place this week when an elderly invalid named Galbraith passed away. The deceased had been an inmate of the hospital for a long time receiving constant treatment. Funeral arrangements will probably be made today, a daughter having reached the city last night to take charge of the body, which has been at Taylor's morgue.

Mrs. T. P. Malone and children left last week on an extended visit to friends in Michigan and Ontario. The newly appointed board of governors of the University will meet for the first time this afternoon in the assembly hall of the collegiate.

Mr. and Mrs. A. T. Mode of Wetaskiwin were visitors in the city over New Years.
